

WHAT IS HISTORY?

History is a social science that studies the past, specifically written documents that narrate to us about the people, societies, ideas, and problems of the past. Its study can be as broad as a time period, group of people, country, or as specific as the study of a single person or war. History also involves other social sciences such as economy, philosophy, sociology and political science, looking at the context and significance of these subjects in how they all affected history.
